Two Hundred Pounds of Giant Powder
Used—The House, With Others, Almost Completely Wrecked, But
No One Was Seriously Hurt.

LEADVILLE, Col., Oct. 18.—Herman Truman, an 18-year-old son of A. S. Truman, attempted an awful crime Saturday night about 12 o'clock. His father's house, 1001 Harrison avenue, a small frame structure, stood about fifty feet from a small mine. The boy, with several companions, procured two hundred pounds of giant powder, and by a deeply laid plan exploded it in the shaft by a fuse. The intention was to kill the boy's father, mother, little brother and sister, against whom he had a fan- cied grudge.

The Truman residence and that of Peter W. Breen, next door, were almost wrecked. Miraculously none of the inmates were seriously injured.

Hundreds of dollars of damage have been done to all residences everywhere near the scene of the explosion. Several houses must be entirely rebuilt. The officers have just started for a canyon about twelve miles from here, where young Truman and his partner were seen Sunday.

ITALIANS AND HUNS

Engage in a Battle—One Killed and Many Wounded.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 18.—Two thousand Italian and Hungarian mine laborers living in the lowest end of Luzerne county are engaged in a bitter race war. The conflict broke out ten days ago. The Hungarians accused the Italians of taking their places in the mines and working for reduced wages. Sunday night there was a conflict at Lattimer and 400 men engaged in battle. John Merlino, a Hungarian, was killed, and twenty-five or thirty Hungarians were injured.

It was an Italian victory, as the latter drove the Huns into their homes. The latter barricaded their doors and windows. Monday night the conflict was renewed, the Hungarians being the aggressors. They surprised the Italians in their shanties. Several houses were demolished. Clubs, stones and iron bars were the weapons used. Many of the men also carried pistols and revolvers. Over fifteen were injured in the melee, but none fatally. Thirty arrests were made by Coal and Iron policemen.

TWO KENTUCKY GIRLS

Who Live on Fish, and Weigh Almost Half a Ton.

PORTSMOUTH, O., Oct. 18.—On one of the many junk boats lying in the Ohio river one mile below this city are two girls who weigh nearly half a ton. The girls are daughters of Joseph Davis and wife. The parents claim Cattsburg as their home and as the birthplace of the girls. They are small in stature, and were born and raised in the mountains of West Virginia. The largest girl, whose name is Margaret, is eleven years of age, and weighs 410 pounds. Her face has a vacant look, and altogether her appearance is repulsive. Her weight causes her much misery. She is gaining flesh at the rate of one pound per month. The smaller girl is five years old, and weighs 206 pounds. She is rather bright and catches. Both girls are monster eaters. The main food is fish caught from the river.

An Offer to Corbett.

BOSTON, Oct. 18.—Capt. Cooke, of this city, has received a telegram from the London Sportsman, under date of October 16, stating that the National club of London offers $4,000 for a glove contest between Champion James J. Corbett and Peter Jackson, and guarantee Jackson all the betting and backing that Corbett requires, and will consent to any time for the meeting which the competitors may decide on, although preferring the end of spring or late in April. Capt. Cooke has wired the telegram to Corbett.

A Big Railroad Deal.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 18.—It was rumored among the railroad offices Monday that a big deal had just been consummated in which the Pennsylvania Southwest system, embracing the Pan-Handle and Vandalia lines, had absorbed the Terre Haute and Peoria road and its branches. This purchase, it is said, has been contemplated for a year past.

Battled to a Draw.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 18.—The first of the great base ball battles between Boston and Cleveland was played Monday to a finish without either side scoring a run. It was pre-eminently a pitcher's battle, the fielding chances in the main being easy. Stivetta and Young were in the best of form, and both received superb support. Eleven innings were played.

Ann Arbor Beats.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 18.—Ann Arbor and the University of Minnesota played foot ball in the mid Monday, the Minnetonkas winning, 14 to 0.

SHOT WHILE HANDCUFFED.

Cowardly Work of a Mob in Dealing With Horse-thieves.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Oct. 18.—News has just been received of the killing by unknown persons of Jones and "Dab" Burch, five miles from Bonanza. These men had been on trial at Bonanza charged with horse stealing and during the progress of the case several gun plays were made in the court room by the prisoners. The prisoners were acquitted of the charge of horse stealing, but were shortly afterward arrested for contempt of court and were fined $10. They would not pay and were started for the Buffalo jail in charge of deputy sheriffs. They were handcuffed and their horses tied together. When five miles from Bonanza an armed party of men stepped from ambush and ordering the deputy sheriff to retreat they assassinated the powerless men, afterward shooting their horses and leaving the dead horses and the dead men in a heap on the roadside. No clue to the attacking party has yet been discovered.

LOST AT SEA.

The Bokhara Sinks in Chinese Waters—
Only Twenty-Three of the Passengers
Are Saved.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Co.'s office in London has received the following:

HONG KONG, Oct. 18.—The Peninsular and oriental steamship Bokhara has been totally wrecked. The steamship struck on a sand island in the group known as the Pescadores, or Fisher's islands, called Pheng Hoo by the Chinese, in the channel of Fokien, in the Chinese sea.

The weather was terrible, and the raging waters quenched the fires on the steamer. The steamer became unmanageable and sank, and the commander and a majority of the officers and crew were lost. Twenty-three persons only were saved. It is feared that those who were lost were mostly Europeans. The Steamship Agents has proceeded to the scene of the wreck.

TO THE HOGS

A Mother Throws Her Little Babe to Hide
the Evidence of Her Shame.

DANVILLE, Ky., Oct. 18.—A horrible crime is reported from Casey county, near Danville, about 40 miles from this city. A young white girl gave birth to an illegitimate child, and in order to hide the evidence of her disgrace, threw the infant to the hogs. Two men saw her at the pen, and growing suspicious on account of her queer actions investigated the matter and found the mangled remains of the infant. The body was taken from the hogs and is now at Liberty, the county seat, preserved in alcohol, to be used as evidence in the trial of the mother.

Old John Brown's Fort Removed.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—John Brown's fort, to gaze upon which tens of thousands of people have journeyed annually to Harper's Ferry, has now a permanent abiding place in Chicago, having been purchased and brought to this city by a company organized for that purpose. It occupies the center of a large and ornate structure erected for its reception, and the formal opening day drew to Wabash avenue and Thirteenth street an immense assemblage, the majority of the participants looking for the first time upon the fortress that has been written about in every known tongue and within the walls of which the man of iron and blood fought the last battle for universal freedom in America.

Minor Election Law Upheld.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The United States supreme court by Chief Justice Fuller Monday affirmed the judgment of the Michigan supreme court, upholding the constitutionality of the famous Miner law, providing for the election of presidential electors by congressional districts instead of by the state as a whole. The court holds that the fourteenth amendment did not limit the right of a state to fix a mode of choosing electors. The conceded effect of the decision is to give a part of the Michigan electoral vote to Cleveland.

Death of a Miser.

LAUREL, Del., Oct. 18.—Some ten days ago John Allen, an eccentric, miserly man of about seventy years of age, died near Seaford. For years Allen made his home in an old box car and sold cigars and tobacco. He was credited by his neighbors with having considerable money, but nothing like the amount that was found. Concealed in different parts of the car were bonds and stocks to the amount of many thousands of dollars, and in a box $2,000 in coin was discovered. Allen leaves a large family.

NARROW ESCAPE

Penitentiary Chaplain in the Hands of a Madman.

A Crazy Convict Claims He Was "Commanded" to Shed Blood.

A Prison Guard Arrives in Time to Prevent the Sacrifice—The Would-Be
Murderer Taken to the Hospital
Where He Afterward Dies.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 18.—Last Saturday Wm. Ferreter, convict No. 22768, serving a sentence from Ashtabula county for house-breaking, began to act peculiarly. He refused to eat any dinner on that day, stating that the Lord had commanded him to abstain from food. He ate nothing from that time until Monday morning. Just before noon Monday he went to the office of Chaplain Dudley and talked strangely on religious topics. He said the Lord had commanded him to make a sacrifice of human blood. Mr. Dudley told him that was unnecessary, as the Saviour had been offered up as a sacrifice. Ferreter then asked if another father in the Bible had not been commanded to shed human blood, and Mr. Dudley, who was alone in the office, began to get decidedly nervous, as he replied that Abraham had been commanded to offer up his son. Ferreter suddenly seized the chaplain's arm in a vice-like grip and glared at him in demoniacal frenzy.

Mr. Dudley, who is a man of slight build, says he was badly scared, and when he saw a guard approaching lost no time in calling on his assistance. As soon as the guard entered Ferreter suddenly departed, going back to the hoe shop. Here he procured a draw-knife and took it to one of the grindstones to put a razor edge on it. He again proclaimed that he had been commanded to shed human blood, and was disarmed and marched off to the deputy warden's office.

While being searched here he became wild and raving, and although handcuffed, required the united effort of Deputy Playford, Guard Gump and Attendant Ashton to hold him. He frothed at the mouth, gnashed his teeth in frenzy and attempted to get Ashton's fingers in his mouth. It was evident that he had been captured just in time to prevent a tragedy. Dr. Rowles tried to quiet him with medicine and a hypodermic injection, and he was led away to the asylum.

Ferreter was locked in a padded cell. Ferreter had been poring over a small paper circulated in the prison called The Prisoner of Hope, which contained a paragraph about the devil's trying to squeeze into a man's heart.

A frightful scene at the penitentiary Monday night formed the closing chapter of the very peculiar case. Ferreter died under the most mysterious circumstances, and his death was preceded by an unusual trial of medical skill. At 2:30 p. m., after being taken to the prison asylum, Ferreter ceased his ravings and his condition became one of utter collapse. He fell into a deep slumber, from which it was impossible to awaken him, and Assistant Penitentiary Physician Heinlein was summoned. He pronounced it a case of opium poisoning, and ordered the man transferred to the asylum. Before the transfer could be made Ferreter ceased to breathe. His limp body was carried to the hospital, then began a struggle to rekindle the spark of his life that his faintly beating heart told was there. Hypodermic injections of aromatic ammonia and digitalis were given. A stomach pump was brought into use. He was placed on a canvas cot and given shower baths of hot and cold water alternately. Artificial respiration was attempted for some time in vain. Mustard plaster, hot bricks, flagellation and every method of restorative known to the medical profession was brought into service. A corps of ten prisoners was kept busy in the effort to revive the man.

It was seemingly useless, however. Ferreter was apparently dead. His limbs became rigid and his flesh blue like that of a corpse. The prisoners ceased their work, and gave the man up for dead. Presently there was another slight breathing, and operations were resumed. It was impossible to even produce artificial respiration for a time, but finally Ferreter began breathing in spasmodic jerks. He opened his eyes and asked for a drink of water. It was given him, and he again apparently died. The attempt to resuscitate Ferreter was continued until, as Dr. Heinlein expressed it: "The man died and was brought to life ten times." At 9 o'clock Monday night it was evident that he could not again be revived and the physicians pronounced him dead. "He died breathing," said one of the hospital attendants, "for we kept his lungs working by artificial means. How the prisoner obtained the poison with which to end his life is a mystery. Dr. Rowles, who first attended him, states that five grains of bromide and ten grains of morphine were given Ferreter to soothe his nerves while he was raving. This was all the medicine administered before he was found in a comatose condition. Ferreter has a wife and daughter living at Terre Haute, Ind.
